- f) the "right to data portability", i.e. the right to receive (or to transmit directly to another data controller) personal data in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format;
- g) the "right to object", i.e. the right to object, in whole or in part:
  - the processing of personal data carried out by the Data Controller for its own legitimate interest;
  - to the processing of personal data carried out by the Data Controller for marketing or profiling purposes.

In the above cases, where necessary, the Data Controller will inform the third parties to whom the personal data of the Data Subject are communicated of the possible exercise of the rights, except in specific cases in which this is not possible or is too onerous and, in any case, in accordance with the provisions of the Privacy Legislation.

It is expressly understood, as provided for in Article 21 of the GDPR, that in the event of the exercise of the right to object by the Data Subject, the Data Controller will refrain from further processing the personal data unless the Data Controller demonstrates the existence of compelling legitimate reasons to proceed with the processing that prevail over the interests, rights and freedoms of the Data Subject or for the establishment, the exercise or defence of a right in court.

The exercise of the above Rights is not subject to any formal constraint and is free of charge. The Data Controller may eventually require the Data Subject to verify his/her identity before taking further action following the request to exercise the aforementioned Rights.

The Data Subject may at any time exercise his/her Rights in the following ways:
